It's great! (Dr. Ron)

It is a rare occasion when something so magnificent comes along it has the power to change your life now, helping you awaken the true power, gifts and incredible talents inside you...if you do just one thing.

Well, NOW is that rare moment, and it is so rare it will not be here tomorrow.

Here's the story...

UNLEASH THE MAGIC OF YOUR MIND!

Exploding shock waves throughout the scientific community, a new theory of mind is being hailed as the most important advance in science for the last 405 years!

In 1602, Sir Francis Bacon launched the scientific method with his stellar Novum Organum, eventually revolutionizing the world.

Few events in history have paralleled the impact science has had upon society, culture and history...until now...

In 1879, the science of psychology was given birth at Leipzig University by Wilhelm Wundt. Since that seminal time in history, many approaches have been applied to investigating how the mind works...but none like this one.

In 1900, Freud published Interpretation of Dreams, and in 1901, The Psychopathology of Everyday Life, igniting a new world of research into the hidden processes of mind. But key parts of the puzzle house of mind he misinterpreted, and others he entirely missed.

In 1905, Einstein published his Special Theory of Relativity, creating an entire new paradigm for exploring the nature of the universe. For years afterward, Einstein attempted to create a general theory of relativity, but failed, because he missed a key concept...

Now, standing upon the shoulders of these luminary geniuses, comes a little old man, a shy college professor who has finally published, after much begging from his colleagues, a new theory of the mind that is exploding the modern-day myths and cherished beliefs of psychologists, psychiatrists and physicists the world over.

After watching What the Bleep Do We Know Anyway?, Dr. Ron Dalrymple realized people were finally asking questions that occurred to him 38 years ago. In the fall of 1969, while a student at the University of Maryland, he was struck by an epiphany that changed his life.

Working at NASA/ Goddard Space Flight Center in a gifted student program, Dalrymple was majoring in math and physics, and had just taken several courses in psychology.

One night in his dormitory on campus, he was struck by a thunderbolt. He saw connections between modern-day psychologies and physics, and realized many principles of psychology could be explained by applications of quantum physics and Einstein's relativity.

In a rare interview, he told us in his own words...

"If you are like me, you've probably spent years and tons of money trying to distill the secrets of life. When I was a 19-year-old student at the University of Maryland, I was struck by a thunderbolt, searing through my mind like an implosion of light. I had just returned to my dorm from NASA. I was working with a great group of people, who gave me my start in science, research and publishing.

"Dr. Paul Lowman, Dr. Herb Blodgett, Dr. Lou Walters, Dr. Isadore Adler, and so many other fine, fine people, it brings tears to my eyes to think of them.

"Many have now passed on, but their influence on me as a young man was utterly profound. I was so blessed to have an opportunity to work with them, during a time when we were putting Neil Armstrong on the moon.

"During my junior year at Maryland, I had begun to take courses in psychology. I was mulling over a few problems in physics that dark evening in November 1969, and I compared some functions in physics to a lecture I heard that day in a psychology class...

"That was when the thunderbolt hit me !

"An epiphany that almost knocked me off my feet.

"It suddenly occurred to me that many principles of psychology could be explained by the precepts of physics and higher mathematics. Instead of the rambling, disjointed fields of psychology that currently existed (and still do), it was possible to put it all together into a unified field theory...one theory explaining it all, at last !

"Excited about my tentative discovery, I told a few of my psychology professors about this. They traded knowing looks and laughed at me.

"One of them said, 'You should go live in California.' "

"But there was one brilliant physicist at NASA who listened, Dr. Isadore (Izzy) Adler. Izzy was a short, stocky guy, trained at City College in New York City, always a deep furrow across his brow as he was absorbed in thought, always a smile on his face.

"His son, Sam, was a pal of mine in the honors program at Maryland, a brilliant young guy in pre-med.

"Shortly after my epiphany, I told Izzy my ideas. He was stunned for a moment, his eyes blank, distant, searching for an answer. Then a light formed in his eyes and a look of intense concentration formed on his features.

"He said, 'Go work it out. Show the world how it all fits together. Then come tell me about it.' Humming to himself, he turned on his heels and spun down the hall, back to his laboratory."

Encouraged by Adler, undaunted by his critics, Dalrymple began a life-long exploration of these principles. He returned to graduate school in 1980 at the University of Maryland, the number one graduate school in the USA for counseling psychology.

His intent was to absorb all the fields of psychology under one umbrella, to create this new theory.

Naive and idealistic, he hoped to find a group of open minds...But for many years, like Newton, Einstein and Tesla, he was viciously attacked, ridiculed and sabotaged by individuals whose restrictive fields of comprehension were threatened by this revolutionary paradigm shift.

Years later, Dalrymple revealed that many of the personality disorders he observed in these professors and graduate students found their way into his books as examples of pathological personalities.

But they were not going to stop him !

After earning his Ph.D. in 1984, Dr. Dalrymple spent years as a psychotherapist, learning what worked in therapy and what didn't, refining his theory and putting it all together. He worked with thousands of patients in many different environments - private practice, state hospitals, prisons, community mental health centers, forensic settings, court rooms, you name it.

His goal was to do it all, see it all, to make his theory the best it could be.

In 1999, he went overseas to teach college for the University of Maryland, to review the entire field of psychology again and to create his theory in it's current form.

Teaching in Japan, Korea and Europe, he taught 14 different courses for Maryland, including counseling and clinical psychology, abnormal psychology, adolescent, educational, developmental, health psychology, biopsychology, experimental design, sensory and perception, personality theory and others, including introductory psychology many, many times.

He also studied the major fields of physics, to discover the many parallels to the world of psychology. He studied Einstein, Planck, Bohr, Shroedinger and many others.

He even ventured into highly unusual fields of study. In his own words...

"Right after I graduated from college in 1971, I discovered the first of many ancient texts I was to uncover. Arcane knowledge kept hidden from the world at large for millenia, preserved by various secret societies. I dove into these musty volumes and devoured them, absorbing knowledge that unveils the enormous potential of the mind and inner self, potential to create success, wealth and well-being without limits !

"Delving further, I came to study the works and teachings of many of the ancient mystery schools that still exist today, schools that were created long ago to preserve for humankind the true secrets of the mind and inner being, secrets hidden until the world was ready to awaken...that time is now."

Finally, after decades of preparation, Dr. Dalrymple sat freezing in a tiny room in the Italian Alps, in Aviano, Italy, composing the most recent edition of his theory.

While overseas, teaching for the US military, Quantum Field Psychology was born. The most complete theory of psychology ever created, integrating all the major fields of psychology under one umbrella, a new paradigm.

Quantum Field Psychology expresses thought and emotion in mathematical terms, describes psychological defenses in differential equations, draws parallels to the worlds of electricity and magnetism, gravitational fields, expands on the space-time-mind continuum and many others, linking the fields of psychology, philosophy and physics into one unified field theory, or theory of everything (TOE).

It is a compilation of knowledge, insight and powers now formally explained for people just like you to understand and immediately use to make your life really work for you.

Knowledge and power that will give you an edge in any situation...if you use it properly.

Dr. Ron said, "Here they are, Izzy, a whole series of books explaining to the world how it all fits together."

Many of you read our best-seller The Inner Manager, the easiest to absorb in this series, helping you get a jump start on your life, and on your competition !

AXIOMS OF QUANTUM FIELD PSYCHOLOGY

AXIOM 1. Thought-emotion waves are generated by the mind as an interaction of biological, sensory, perceptual, memory and abstracting processes, which transcend and project beyond the human brain. Every human thought-emotion generates its corresponding pilot wave, which travels through space.

" The pilot wave parallels deBroglie's proposal in 1900 that a pilot wave is attached to every particle of matter. DeBroglie's concept was quickly adopted by Einstein (Herbert, 1985, p. 40).

The emanation of waveforms from living organisms provides an explanation for ESP phenomena, plant reactions to thought, animals that respond to human emotion and mental states, and many other phenomena found by Soviet and former Eastern block countries chronicled by Ostander and Schroeder (1970)."

How do these waveforms affect us, and the world around us? Profoundly, and in very specific ways.

Quantum Field Psychology (QFP) reveals the secrets of personal magnetism, concentration, emotional harmony and successful relationships.

Most importantly, it is a breakthrough set of principles to help you leap beyond the blocks and impediments that may have held you back for years.

Many systems of self-development can help you grow some, but your progress then stops...because their system only goes so far.

QFP is a comprehensive system, with far-reaching principles and effects to help you get on top and stay there.

A theory that finally unveils for the ages the secrets of success, wealth, power and happiness.

Understand emotions and mood disorders, psychological defense mechanisms, personality disorders, dissociative disorders and other states of mind from a whole new perspective.

See how classical conditioning, operant conditioning, social learning, psychodynamic, gestalt, NLP, behavioral, cognitive-behavioral and humanistic theories all fit under this new paradigm.

A meta-theory of thought, now presented to the world, by best-selling author Dr. Ron Dalrymple.

For anyone who is seeking to use math to describe the complicated and emotional relationships among all human beings, I certainly recommend this book."

Michael A. Tisher, M.A., ABD

University of Maryland University College, Asian Division

"Dr. Dalrymple, in his fascinating book, Quantum Field Psychology, The Thoton Particle Theory, raises the field of psychology to a new plane - one where hard science resides! By deconstructing emotions in the systematic, logical language of physics - he reveals emotions as measurable and tangible - a truly amazing scientific breakthrough."

Katina Matthews-Ferrari, M.D.
